

Huynh Giao, PhD

Dr. Huynh Giao is currently a lecturer working at the Faculty of Public Health, University of Medicine and Pharmacy at Ho Chi Minh City (UMP HCMC, Vietnam). She obtained her medical doctor from UMP HCMC in 1999, and then completed her master's and doctoral degree majoring in pediatrics in 2010 and 2019, respectively. In addition, she was working as a consultant for medical students at the Clinic of Family Medicine at Dist 2 Hospital in HCMC. Currently, she is involving in several projects at UMP HCMC toward a response to COVID-19, in which she plays a role as the main investigator. So far, she has published over 30 peer-reviewed publications in ISI/Scopus as well as prestigious national journals. The main research areas have been focused on the community health toward non-communicable/communicable diseases and primary care of children such as vaccination and nutrition.

